Old Transactions Plea.

It was the contention of the lawyers for the Standard Oil Company that the Government's petition erred in reciting transactions which dated back of the sent organization of the Standard Oil Company and its taking over of the properties of the old trust. This was critical for the Government. It was Cross-Examiner necessary to be able to tell the story of the old trust and to connect its operations with those of the present corporation and to show that there was a continuous and uniform policy, in order to establish firmly the claim of conspiracy in restraint of trade. That the old Oil trust, which flourished from 1882 to 1899, was a conspiracy has been judicially established. There is an ample volume of history to prove it. To show that the corporation is no wise different from the old trust, except in form, was the task of the Government. This is permitted under the ruling the court has made. necessary to be able to tell the stor

Trustees' Enormous Power.

The Standard Oil trust was an organization under which thirty-nine corporations owning oil wells, lands, refineries, pipe lines, etc., turned their properties John D. Rockefeller, William Rockefeller, Oliver H. Payne, J. A. Bostwick, Henry M. Flagler, W. G. Wardman, Henry M. Flagier, W. G. Wardman, Charles Pratt, Benjamin Brewster, and John D. Archbold. Of these, Messrs. John D. Rockefeller and William Rockefeller, Payne, Flagler, and Pratt are still directors of the Standard Oil Company, and are among the individual defendants named in the Government's petition. These nine trustees under the old 'rust agreement were the rulers of the world of oil. In 1899 the Ohio supreme court declared the trust arrangement void and compelled its dissolution. Then the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey took over all the certificates of trusteeship issued its stock in exchange for them, elected the trustees of the old trust to be its directors and whose life had been ad the dely depraved before he entered to the profession of murder for Orchard again brazenly avowed his goof the crime of bigamy. Judges Vote Unanimous.

The Government, however, would have been hard put to it to prove all that it desired, if it had not been allowed to go back of 1899. The Standard's law yer, John J. Johnson, of Philadelphia, insisted that it could not go further back sisted that it could not go further back than that. He excepted to pretty much everything in the Government's bill, and on this general list of exceptions there was a long argument before the full bench of the eighth circuit—Judges San-born. Vandevanter, Adams, and Hook. By a unanimous voice the beuch has sustained the Government's petition, required the Standard Oil Company to answer it, and has given the Government a sweeping victory.

The inserting the standard of the government as weeping victory.

The net result of the entire day's work, therefore, was that his story of murder was unshaken, and that some of the points he had made on direct

Taking of Testimony Now.

The Standard will of course appeal begin July 1 and is likely to consume many weeks. Under the ruling of the circuit court, the Government's case Oil. Nothing will be omitted that will tend to show the animus of the trustees of the old Oil trust. Their methods of extracting rebates from railroads; their system of underselling competition till it was driven from the field and then raising the prices high enough to make back all that had been lost; their employment of railroad men to secure for them confidential information about the business and shipments of competitors; all these aspects of the oil business for a quarter of a century and more will be developed in the testimony for which the Government now haz secured a right-of-way.

Coming down to the present, it will be shown that of the nine men who managed the old trust, five—a-majority—are still directors of the Standard Oil Company; one of them is its president and another its secretary. They dominate it completely, and have imposed upon it the policy of the old trust. Even the earnings have continued, year by year, in about the same proportion than it was to blow them up with dynamite. There was no indication that it ever interfered seriously with his true vocation of murder.

Richardson spent a lot of time over this connection of Orchard with Scott. He brought in also K. C. Sterling, the chief sleuth of the Cripple Creek Mine Owners' Association. Orchard prompting admitted that he had seen and talked with Sterling two or three times. He met Sterling, he said, in Scott's office in the railroad station at Cripple Creek.

The purpose of Richardson in all cases was to lay the foundation for the charge which is coming that Orchard was really a detective in the employ of the methods of the reference seriously with that it ever interfered seriously with his true vocation of murder.

Richardson spent a lot of time over these that it ever interfered seriously with that it eve

Kellogg in Full Charge.

Already officials of the Department of Justice have been planning on the later stages of the proceeding-the appeal to the circuit court of appeals and the Supreme Court. Attorney Kellogg will undoubtedly have complete charge, under the Attorney General, of the pro-under the Attorney General, of the proceedings from this time forward. It was he who secured the decision dissolving the Paper trust, and his record as a "trust buster," if, as is now confidently believed, he forces dissolution of the Standard Oil Company, will piace him at the head of that class.

Mr. Kellogg was here when news came from St. Paul of the court's ruling sustaining his petition. He was overjoyed, for while he had been confident, yet the ruling, so prompt and so sweeping, and concurred in by a unanimous court, was highly gratifying. He would not discuss it further than to say it was of the utmost importance, and indicated that the Government's case was certain to prove very strong. In other quarters it is taken as an earnest of ultimate compilete overthrows of the Standard. it is taken as an earnest of ultima complete overthrow of the Standard.

COLLINS RE-SWORN, DIPLOMAT NEMESIS

Glen Echo, Md., Town Marshal Collins appeared before the mayor and council at the regular meting and filed his bond for the faithful performance of his office for the term of one year, in the sum of $2,000. The bond was accepted by the council whereupon Mayor Garrett in the presence of the council and a number of Mr. Collins' friends administered the oath of office.

As Mayor Garrett arose and command ed Coilins to rise and hold up his right hand, every person immediately stood up as the oath was administered which made Collins the marshal for another year after which the redoubtable received the congratulations of the mayor and then the members of the council. Every one else offered congratulations to the marshal and best wishes in assuming the duties of the office for a second term.

This means that Collins will continue for another year as a Nemesis for autoists who are prone to speed up along the Conduit road. It also means that Glen Echo approves of the marshal's course in halting all violators whether they are diplomats or not. ed Collins to rise and hold up his right

WOMEN IN RACING PARTNERSHIP.

Two New York society leaders, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Mrs. Herman B. Duryea, formed a partnership at one time and went into horse racing, registering in the Jockey Club as "Mr. Roslyn." Their identity remained secret for a short time, but eventually pretty much everyhody saw through the fiction. The resultant publicity was more than they could stand, so they retired from the turf after liquidating a deficit which would have embarrassed many other women in their own set.

OF MINE OWNERS, DEFENSE'S CLAIM

Former Lieutenant Governor David Coates, of Colorado, who, Orchard declared, told him to kidnap two children of August Faulson, a wealthy mine owner of Wallace, came to town during the night, with blood in his eyes.

He told Richardson in unequivocal terms that Orchard was a liar, and declares he will take the stand to prove it. He conferred with Richardson, and gave him information which may prove of good use in grilling Orchard.

Fails to Shake Orchard's Story

BOISE, Idaho, June 8 .- Under Richrdson's cross-examination it was established that Harry Orchard was a poker player for money, a thief of highwho was not particular whether he stole from his mining emor his murdering mates; traitor to his partners, turning informer because he was jealous of their selection of another to do an easy trick of train and their proxies over to nine trustees. wrecking; a traitor to his new detective employers, giving them the double cross the business without restriction, were as soon as he found that he could get murdering and dynamiting, and, in general, a man whose life had been admittedly depraved before he entered upon Orchard again brazenly avowed his guilt

"You married a widow with two children, didn't you?" asked Richardson. "No; with three children," replied

The care with which Orchard changed Richardson's two to three was a sample of the exactness with which he anhammer-and-tongs all day, and time after time Richardson picked up a statement he had made and, modifying it ment he had made and, modifying it, sometimes slightly, sometimes to a greater extent, made it the basis of another question. Not once did Orchard permit the change to go unchallenged, sometimes it was, "Excuse me. Mr. Richardsop, I said this, and that so." Sometimes it was, "I beg your pardon, it was this way." Oftener it was just plain "No, I didn't say that." He was alert and cool all the time, watched his questioner like a hawk, and never subscribed to a statement until It was in the form that suited him.

Tarbell's history of Standard It was a milder form of amusement Oil. Nothing will be omitted that will perhaps, to take money from the hated

It is evident that that is how the defense is preparing to explain away the terrible story he has told. The way is being paved now for the contention that all the crimes to which Orchard has confessed were really the work of the mine owners and their hirelings, committed for the purpose of discredit-ing the mine workers.

Orchard's Career As Superintendent Of Sunday School

WOOLER, Ontarlo, June 8.-The crimes of arson, theft from creditors, desertion of three women, two of whom he had married, and the deaths of his Quaker parents of broken hearts, are the new offenses charged to Alfred Horsley, alias Harry Orchard, by his neighbors in this town, his birthplace.

Horsley was brought up in the Quaker faith, but when nearing manhood shifted to the Methodist, having been con-tion he retained until 1885, when he left this section.

However, in the spring of 1885, Horsley found himself involved in financial difficulties, with the probability of embarrassment on account of his intimacy with one of the women of his congregation. No one knew it until his cheese factory burned. When he attempted to collect the insurance the scandal arose. Horsley fled the town and country. He took with him $900 in cash which he had realized from the huried sale, and another man's wife, whose name is recalled as Hattie Simpson.
